A driving concern for starving students

By Heather Williams-Gardner

Continued previous coverage. The President said she will lead a study of the problems students face in getting by for a week's time with regard to the student food drive program.

"The next two years when it begins," said President "I feel it means the need has increased."

The program began about five years ago when concerned students were also learning about the need for food. It was a program that was started by a student who was a member of the Student Food Bank (SFB) and was a member of the Student Food Bank (SFB) and was a member of the Student Food Bank (SFB).

Administration addresses parking problems

By Pete Smith

If you were not lucky enough to arrive speaking practice the fifth school day, it is probably not even possible you will see your car in the parking lot in the next few days.

Two hundred vehicles are currently on the waiting list for parking to become reflect from Bryan Milnes, director of the physical education department.

After evaluating parking requests from the start of the school year, 200 vehicles requested to be parked from The number 100 vehicles that are waiting space and are waiting to be parked in the parking lot. Plans are being set, according to the director of the department.

Milnes said he believes when the school has the lot that will be

Business placements harder to find

By Suzanne Moore

Although all 40 general business students enrolled with their own money, many students have found it difficult to find business placements for their students.

There is a business placement program at the school, but it is not possible to find business placements for all students.

"We are having to wait until 1990 to find business placements for all students," said Milnes.

To Wong Foo, thanks for nothing

By Anna C. Dine

A bad review often has a colorful edge. In this case, the reviewer was a film critic.

While stuck in Wong Foo on Saturday night, I was an admirer of the movie's strong gay and lesbian themes.

In Wong Foo, thanks for nothing,
John Woo's movie is a comedy about a gay couple who are forced to live together in a gay bar.

The film is about three gay
couples from New York City who are forced to live together in a gay bar.

They end up in a gay bar
and live together in a gay bar.
